

I'm against The Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) challenge of Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in a proceeding before the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

The CBA should not be allowed to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers. If this is approved, it will defeat the whole purpose of the Telephone Privacy Law. All of these institutions are reaching their customers as well as their potential customers with direct mail. If people want extra services from these institutions, they will respond to the direct mail pieces that most of get at least every other day.
